

The Impacts of Unintentional Bias

How to Be Kind and Collegial with People Who Have Different Backgrounds

We live in an area that is highly diverse. Every day we interact with individuals who are different from us in terms of cultural background, primary language, religion, sexual orientation, gender identity, socioeconomic status, education, political background, and abilities. To be successful at work and in our personal lives, it is imperative to recognize these differences and to understand how our perceptions about them influence our own behavior and the actions of those around us.
